Agriculture & Livestock Sector

Our //

Agriculture and livestock are the backbone of Afghanistan's economy, providing employment for over 80% of the population and contributing significantly to the country's GDP. The country's fertile soil and favorable climate make it an ideal location for agriculture, with a wide range of crops grown throughout the country.

Afghanistan is known for its production of fruits and vegetables, including grapes, pomegranates, apricots, and melons. The country is also a major producer of nuts, such as almonds, pistachios, and walnuts. In addition, Afghanistan is a significant producer of wheat, which is a staple food for the majority of the population.

Livestock is also an important part of Afghanistan agricultural sector, with millions of sheep, goats, and cattle raised throughout the country. Livestock provides a source of income for many rural families, as well as a source of food and raw materials for the production of leather and wool.

Despite the importance of agriculture and livestock to the Afghan economy, the sector faces many challenges, including limited access to modern technology and equipment, poor infrastructure, and insecurity in some parts of the country. However, the Afghan government and international organizations are working to address these challenges and support the growth of the agricultural sector.
